P.S. The Washington University Alumni Association strongly recommends that you purchase travel insurance for every trip on which you plan to embark. Unforeseen circumstances may cause you to cancel your trip at the last minute, and travel insurance will help to ensure that your fees are refunded. Washington University does not offer its own travel insurance, but Gohagan & Company recommends a policy you may purchase.

The Truffle Hunt

Truffles—precious subterranean mushrooms that grow in forests in only a few regions of the world—are highly prized and extremely expensive. Why are truffles so pricey? They are seasonal, require very specific conditions to grow—for example, near the roots of oak, hazel or chestnut trees—take a long time to cultivate, must be harvested by hand and have a very short shelf life.

In Provence and Burgundy, black truffles—known locally as black diamonds—are the predominant type. They are firm and black, ranging from the size of a walnut to a small peach, with a rough, bumpy surface. The flesh inside is light brown and emits an aroma variously described as earthy, woody or nutty. Their delicate flavor has a unique appeal that keeps the world enthralled.

These rare gems can be difficult to find. Fortunately, when underground, truffles emit a distinctive aroma, apparently redolent of the scent of male pigs. For that reason, female pigs used to be the main instrument for sniffing out and unearthing these beloved tubers. However, many truffles were trampled or eaten during the process. Nowadays, dogs are trained to hunt down the precious comestibles and indicate where they are without damaging them. Vive les chiens!

Immersive Provence

The legendary 15th-century Hôtel-Dieu

The elements of a quintessential Provençal experience—with wine, cuisine, art and architecture—come together during an unforgettable trip to southeastern France during the autumn harvest season. Vineyards, hilltop villages and lavender fields form the mesmerizing backdrop for a living canvas, where a quaint street-side café in Arles once served as van Gogh’s muse, an ancient castle has evolved into a renowned Beaujolais wine estate and fresh, seasonal local ingredients result in robust Provençal culinary delights. Experience southeastern France’s breathtaking landscapes and transcendent light which has inspired artists over the centuries. Taste your way through the wine regions of Burgundy, Beaujolais and the Rhône Valley. Hunt for truffles in the countryside. Gaze at Rogier van der Weyden's altarpiece painting “The Last Judgment.” And stand in awe before Romanesque, Gothic, Roman and medieval architecture in this magical place called Provence.
